

Diploma in Psychological Studies

Modules Synopses

1. Social Psychology

This module focuses on the study of human social behaviour and how we react to different interpersonal issues. Students will also learn how to conduct social psychological research and apply qualitative and quantitative analyses on the acquired data.

2. Abnormal Psychology

This module will focus on issues including personality and behavioural disorders, pervasive developmental disorder, learning disabilities and mental health problems. The theories, causes and treatment will also be covered in this module.

3. Educational psychology

This module focuses on the ways human learn in educational settings. Students will be exposed to the different intervention strategies and methods of learning in the education systems.

4. Industrial and Organisational Psychology

This module train students to apply the theories of psychology to industrial and organisational settings. Topics will also include structures of organisation and group processes. Students will be able to apply psychological concepts to understand issues such as occupational stress, motivation, morale and productivity.

5. Health Psychology

The focus of this module explores the psychological effects on human with relations to physical health. Topics in this module include how health issues such as stress, death, chronic illnesses and terminal diseases affects the human systems psychologically.

Updated on 9th June 2012

